

Global Journal of Emerging Market Economies

CALL FOR PAPERS

There is immense interest today in the various economic, political and social issues facing emerging market countries. While such countries vary in size, history, resource endowments and income, they all share superior prospects for sustainable growth based on prudent macro-economic management, economic liberalization, openness to global markets and foreign investment, and a dynamic domestic private sector. International investors and multilateral companies have a keen interest in increasing their exposure to these economies. The emerging markets economies as well as the international business community have a shared interest in trade and investment related issues specific to these economies.

This peer-reviewed journal aims to provide a body of knowledge through its publications, for the policy-makers, business executives and researchers for making decisions related to the economic prospects and performance of emerging market economies.

Submission are made online to the editor at the following email address: journal@bnu.edu.cn