

JHTR* Author Guidelines for New Submissions

February 2022

Author-Friendly Flexible Formatting

The Journal of Hospitality and Tourism Research (JHTR) differentiates between the requirements for new and revised submissions. You can submit your manuscript as a single anonymous WORD file to be used in the review process. If your paper reaches the final stage of revisions, you will be requested to submit your paper following our required format guidelines and provide the items required for the potential publication of your article.

Article Type and Length

Manuscripts should not exceed the word counts listed below by category. The word count limit includes all words, all pages, and all content, from title page to end of references and appendix, including tables and figures. If your paper is accepted and exceeds the word count limit, you can use the online supplement for some of your tables, figures, appendices, transcripts, scanned documents, or other lengthy materials. The online supplement is an online storage medium that is publicly accessible and stored on an open SAGE website. Items featured in the online supplement do not count toward your word count limit.

1. Full-length articles: Between 6,000-9,000 words in length (including tables, figures, and references)
2. Research Notes, Viewpoints and Commentary, Publications in Review, and Industry Viewpoints: Between 2,000-3,000 words in length (including tables, figures, and references)
3. The Rejoinders section of the journal is intended to publish short articles, commentaries, and rebuttals on the contents of JHTR. Rejoinders should generally not exceed 1,000 words in total length. Authors should submit such contributions immediately after an issue of JHTR is published so that their response appears in the subsequent issue if possible.

Submission Preparation

Manuscripts should be submitted via SAGE's Manuscript Central at <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/jhtr>. To facilitate the double-anonymized peer-review process, each new submission should be broken into two separate files: (1) Title Page and (2) Anonymous Main Document. Identifying information should not appear anywhere within the Main Document file.

File 1: Title Page

1. Title
2. Author(s) name, title, institution, address, telephone number, and e-mail address
3. Author(s) note
4. Acknowledgment
5. Financial disclosure, if applicable
6. Total word count

File 2: Anonymous Main Document

Essential elements of the manuscript

At this point, there are no strict formatting requirements, but the manuscript must contain the essential elements including: Article Title (without author information), Abstract, Keywords, Introduction, the Main Body of the research, References, Tables, and Figures in a single anonymous WORD file. Divide the article into clearly defined sections and subsections. Author identifying information should not appear anywhere in the main document to preserve anonymity during the review process. Please do not include any acknowledgments or disclose any funding sources in the version(s) of the manuscript intended for peer review.

Figures and tables embedded in the text

Please ensure that figures and tables are included in the main document, and they should be placed next to the relevant text in the manuscript, rather than at the bottom or the top of the file. The corresponding caption should be placed directly above the figure or table.

Submissions must be written in English.

Proofreading and Copy Editing

It is essential that you proofread your manuscript carefully before submission and consider hiring a copy editor—especially if you are new to the field or if English is not your first language. See Note to Authors below.

Visit SAGE Language Services on our Journal Author Gateway for further information.
4. JHTR strives to publish research with IMPACT – JHTR publications are expected to be Innovative, Meaningful, Practically relevant, Academically rigorous, Cross-disciplinary, and Theory-focused.
 - a. Innovative: Does the submission provide new and insightful ways of exploring and conceptualizing an issue; offer different, unique, or controversial perspectives on a research topic; and/or bring together ideas, theories, and concepts in novel and thought-provoking way?
 - b. Meaningful: Does the submission appeal to a broad range of academic and non-academic audiences and address issues that are meaningful and significant to scholars as well as non-academic stakeholders such as practitioners, policy makers, and/or consumers in hospitality and tourism and related fields?

- c. Practically relevant: Does the submission clearly address the “so what” question by highlighting the managerial and policy implications of their research?
- d. Academically rigorous: Is this submission conceptually and methodologically rigorous? Research published in JHTR should have progressed through a rigorous, proper, and stringent knowledge development process that ensures that the output is academically sound. Authors must identify a clear theoretical approach and articulate how the research advances our understanding of particular topics, concepts, or theories.
- e. Cross-disciplinary: While not a requirement for publication, we welcome contributions to theory that are not only relevant to hospitality and tourism but can transcend our disciplinary boundaries and potentially apply across other disciplines and/or contexts.
- f. Theory-focused: Does the submission cultivate concepts, frameworks, models, and theories that extend our understanding of relevant hospitality and tourism phenomena and inform the direction of future research? We particularly encourage and champion the development of theories and frameworks that originate from the hospitality and tourism field. Accordingly, contributing authors should pay particular attention to the interplay between concepts and contexts to create opportunities for theory building that captures the complexities, intricacies, and dynamics of hospitality and tourism phenomena.
