Guidelines for Submitting Comments

Comments are critical reactions to articles published in this journal. The authors of the articles which receive comments will be invited to write a reply. This will be printed alongside the original remarks. The purpose of the Comments Section is to foster an ongoing critical discussion around the articles published.

Should anyone wish to submit a comment, they must first contact the Comments Section Editor directly. Comments may contain between 1,500 and 2,000 words (including footnotes and references). They do not undergo a double-blind peer review, but are directly reviewed by the Comments Section Editor. Once the Editor agrees that a draft is ready for publication, the text will be sent to the Managing Editor, who makes the final decision.
