

Call for Proposals: New Editor of The Journal of Environment & Development

Sage announces the search for a new Editor of our journal, The Journal of Environment & Development (JED). This peer-reviewed, quarterly publication seeks to further research and debate on the nexus of environment and development issues at the local, national, regional, and international levels. We are currently accepting editor applications for a three-year term commencing January 1, 2026.

The Journal of Environment & Development offers policy-makers, non-governmental organizations, scientists, academics, and the business community the only international forum that combines cutting edge academic research with practical analysis of working policies. The broad scope and interdisciplinary nature of The Journal of Environment & Development are demonstrated by the wide variety of interests and disciplines of its readers and contributors, which include political science, international relations, economics, development studies, sociology, environmental studies and law.

Applicants should have a distinguished scholarly record in topics on international environment and development and experience in academic leadership roles. Applicants should also possess strong organizational and management skills, the ability to work well with others, and a commitment to Sage's mission: building bridges to knowledge — supporting the development of ideas through the research process to scholarship that is certified, taught, and applied. This means playing a creative role in society by disseminating, teaching, and research on a global scale, the cornerstones of which are good, long-term relationships, a focus on our markets, and an ability to combine quality and innovation.

The Editor will be responsible for soliciting, reviewing, and making final decisions on submissions to the journal, and will manage all aspects of the publication and review process using the Manuscript Central electronic submission and review platform. Editors are expected to maintain timely and effective communication, advance journal performance, and work towards upholding JED's high-quality standard.

Applications should include:

- a current CV, including a list of publications
- a letter of intent sharing your perspective on prospective editorial strategy for the journal, current strengths and weaknesses of the journal, and preliminary plans for the editorial board
- in instances when prospective institutional support is available, please include any relevant documentation. Support can include additional faculty release time, support for staff or student workers, office space, the use of computers and other office equipment, utilities, other basic expenses, travel funds, and/or summer salary. Please note Sage provides JED with resources/support and those without institutional support are not viewed as less competitive

Applications, nominations, and requests for additional information should be sent electronically to Maya Dixon, Publishing Editor, at Maya.Dixon@Sagepub.com. Please put "JED Editor Application" in the subject line of your email. Please send in applications and inquiries by April 25, 2025.

